Dominican Republic: The Dominican Government is expecting a wave of violence provoked by the extreme left during the next few days.

Donald Reid Cabral, president of the ruling triumvirate, says that he anticipates the outlawed pro-Castro 14th of June Political Group (APCJ) to mark its anniversary by instigating strikes, sabotage, and violent antigovernment demonstrations. He asserts that the group "knows full well" that if the date passes peacefully it is "finished" as a political force.

Reid, who takes the position that the "first duty of the government is to stay in power," has indicated an intention to use "maximum force" to maintain order. The US Embassy comments that provocations by extremists could easily lead to serious incidents.

COLOMBIA

Colombia: The government's month-old military campaign to eliminate a Communist enclave in south central Colombia is now provoking violence elsewhere in the country.

At least one person was killed and several others injured last week end in a series of bombing incidents that occurred in several widely separated cities.

Anonymous phone calls to newspapers in Bogota and Cali asserted that the bombings were protests against the army's campaign in the Marquetalia area and indicated that more violence was to follow.

Aside from resistance in the area, the Communists' reaction to this campaign previously had been limited to propaganda attacks, incitement of protest demonstrations, and the sending of food and supplies to the enclave.

NOTES

Italy: The political controversy which arose last week is dying down as a result of the Christian Democratic Party's reaffirmation of its commitment to the coalition's long-range reform program. A Socialist leader has told the US Embassy that his party's ministers are "fully satisfied" with the statement and do not foresee a governmental crisis, at least until the nationwide local elections next fall. The government's political difficulties will continue, however, as a result of opposition from Christian Democratic right-wingers to the reform program, and the qualms of some Socialists--such as the influential editor of the party paper, Avanti!--that the Christian Democrats may not intend to move ahead with the program. /

25X1

Panama: Several recent bombing incidents, one involving President Chiari's brother's home, may be aimed at maintaining political tension in the post-election period. There is some reason to suspect that either pro-Castroists or followers of Arnulfo Arias were behind the bombings. If they were, more hit-and-run attacks can be expected, perhaps including some intended to provoke the national guard into taking retaliatory action. /

25X1

*Cuba: All four of the SAM installations evacuated in late May have been relocated and may be fully manned by Cubans, /

25X1

Three of the sites have been emplaced within 13 miles of Santa Clara in central Cuba, substantially improving the defense of that important military area. The fourth relocated site was moved to a position less than a mile from its original emplacement at Mariel, probably for local geographic reasons.
